- (c) Examine the impact of festivals on the common man.

4. Read the following passage and answer the questions below : (5 × 2 = 10)

It has already been said that lawyers use written words and sentences as if they were to be spoken orally; that is their mistake. Conversation is at its best when it is a hit and miss affair — often conveyed by a glance, a gesture, a tone or even a pause. What was clear and forceful when spoken will often appear disconnected, redundant and even ungrammatical when printed.

We must never forget the magic of the spoken word. The ancient Greeks, who were, and still remain, the great masters of the literary world, knew the deep difference between speech and writing. With them these two arts of oratory and rhetoric were carried to the highest point reached by man ; and yet with them the two arts were always separate and distinct. The spoken word is the natural and instinctive means of expression of the human being. Writing is always what lawyers call an "ex-parte proceeding" — There is only one side represented.

Questions :

- (a) What mistakes are normally made by lawyers while writing?
- (b) What is meant by conversation?
- (c) Who are referred to as masters of literary world during the ancient period?
- (d) How did the Greeks maintain the difference between the spoken and written words?
- (e) Compare spoken and written skills.

Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison. The proper place-to-day, the only place which Massachusetts has provided for her freer and less desponding spirits, is in her prisons, to be put out and locked out of the state by her own act. It is there that the fugitive slave, and the Mexican prisoner on parole, and the Indian come to plead the wrongs of his race, should find them; and is the only house in a slave-state in which a free man can abide with honour. A minority is powerless while it conforms to the majority; it is not even a minority then; but it is irresistible when it clogs by its whole weight. If the alternative is to keep all just men in prison, or give up war and slavery, the state will not hesitate which to choose.

Questions :

- (a) Which is a just place for a true man?
- (b) What type of people find refuge in the prison of Massachusetts?
- (c) How can a minority become powerful?
- (d) What type of state is Massachusetts?
- (e) When is a minority powerless?

11. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below : (5 × 1 = 5)

A mock trial differs from a moot in that it is a mock jury-trial, with jury and witnesses, not an argument on law. The proceedings may be somewhat humorous; witnesses may dress themselves up, and court and counsel wear robes. The audience may consist of non-lawyers, who, of course, come simply to be entertained. Since the trial is unrehearsed, it requires a high standard of forensic ability on the part of the student "counsel". There are two ways in which the "case" may be got up. Firstly it may be enacted beforehand by the witnesses, so that they testify to what they have actually witnessed. Secondly, the organiser of the mock trial may simply have given to each witness a statement of his evidence, which he or she is expected to remember. The actual trial is a valuable experience for budding advocates.

Questions :

- (a) What is a mock trial?
  - (b) How different is it from moot?
  - (c) What is required of the student counsel?
  - (d) What are the ways of bringing in the case?
  - (e) How helpful is the trial to law students?

People talk of memorials to him in statues of bronze or marble or pillars and thus they mock him and belie his message. What tribute shall we pay to him that he would have appreciated? He has shown us the way to live and the way to die and if we have not understood that lesson, it would be better that we raised no memorial to him, for the only fit memorial is to follow reverently in the path he showed us and to do our duty in life and in death.

He was a Hindu and an Indian, the greatest in many generations and he was proud of being a Hindu and an Indian. To him India was dear, because she had represented throughout the ages certain immutable truths. But though he was intensely religious and came to be called the Father of the Nation which he had liberated, yet no narrow religious or national bonds confined his spirit. And so he became the great internationalist, believing in the unity of man, underlying unity of all religions and devoting himself to the service of the poor.

11. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below: (5 × 1 = 5)

It is the height of selfishness for men, who fully appreciate in their own case the great advantage of a good education, to deny these advantages to women. There is no valid argument by which the exclusion of the female sex from the privilege of education can be defended. It is argued that women have their domestic duties to perform, and that, if they were educated, they would busy themselves in their books and have little time for attending to the management of their households. But, some argue that education would help them perform their household work in a better manner. For education involves knowledge of the means by which health may be guarded, children may be reared properly and may promote healthy living style etc. Education can also help women to analyse superstitious beliefs before believing them. It builds confidence and also helps them to understand things properly.

Questions:

- (a) Why did men deny the benefits of education to women?

Hospitality is a virtue for which the natives of the East in general are highly admired; and the people of Egypt are well entitled for such admiration. A word which signifies literally "a person on a journey" ("musafir") is the term most commonly employed in this country in the sense of a visitor or guest. There are very few persons here who would think of sitting down to meal, if there were a stranger in the house without inviting him to partake of it, unless the latter were a menial, in which case, he would be invited to eat with the servants. It would be considered a shameful violation of good manners if a Muslim abstained from ordering the table to be prepared at the usual time because a visitor happened to be present.

11. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below. (5 × 1 = 5)

These changes reflect not merely growth and development in our law and society, but also, I believe, a marked change in the nature of the work done by lawyers, or atleast by many lawyers. At an earlier date, by far the largest part of the activity of a busy lawyer was in the preparation and trial of cases in court and in family counselling, usually with respect to real estate or other property transactions such as wills and trusts. For the past fifty years, first in the big cities and then in other active law offices, the work has more and more involved matters of business counselling. Some times lawyers have given up their practices and have become businessmen. But more often they have continued to function as lawyers, giving advice on many types of problems to their business clients. During the same period many lawyers have been called into public service of one sort or another for the important portion of their careers. The law schools have had no alternative but to devote much of their time to problems of public law, securities legislation, government regulation of business, including anti trust law and taxation to mention only some of the newer fields.

I wanted to avoid violence, I want to avoid violence, Non-violence is the first article of my faith. It is also the last article of my creed. But I have to make my choice. I had either to submit to a system which I considered had done an irreparable harm to my country, or incur the risk of the mad fury of my people busting forth, when they understood the truth from my lips. I know that my people have sometimes gone mad. I am deeply sorry for it and I am therefore here to submit not to a light penalty but to the highest penalty. I do not ask for mercy, I do not plead any extenuating act. I am here therefore to invite and cheerfully submit to the highest penalty that can be inflicted upon me for what in law is a deliberate crime and what appears to me to be the highest duty of a citizen. The only course open to you, the judge is, as I am just going to say in many statements either to resign your post or inflict on me the severest penalty, if you believe that the system and law you are assisting to administer are good for the people. I do not expect that kind of conversion. You will perhaps have a glimpse of what is raging within my breast to run this maddest risk which a sane man can run.

Gandhiji's death brought more tributes than have been paid at the passing of any other human being in history. Perhaps what would have pleased him best was the spontaneous tributes that came from the people of Pakistan. On the morrow of the tragedy, all of us forgot for a while the bitterness that had crept in, the estrangement and conflict of these past months and Gandhiji stood out as the beloved champion and leader of the people of India, of India as it was before partition cut up this living nation.

What was his great power over the minds and hearts of men due to? It was his dominating passion for truth. He strongly stressed that good ends cannot be attained by evil means. 11. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below : (5 × 1 = 5)

Justice concerns itself with the proper ordering of things and people within a society. As a concept it has been subject to philosophical, legal, and theological reflection and debate throughout our history. A number of important questions surrounding justice have been fiercely debated over the course of western history: What is justice? What does it demand of individuals and societies? What is the proper distribution of wealth and resources in society: equal, meritocratic, according to status, or some other arrangement? There are myriad possible answers to these questions from divergent perspectives on the political and philosophical spectrum. According to most theories of justice, it is overwhelmingly important: John Rawls, for instance, claims that "Justice is the first virtue of social institutions, as truth is of systems of thought." Justice can be thought of as distinct from and more fundamental than benevolence, charity, mercy, generosity or compassion. Justice has traditionally been associated with concepts of fate, reincarnation or Divine Providence, i.e. with a life in accordance with the cosmic plan. The association of justice with fairness has thus been historically and culturally rare and is perhaps chiefly a modern innovation. Studies at UCLA in 2008 have indicated that reactions to fairness are "wired" into the brain and that, "Fairness is activating the same part of the brain that responds to food in rats... This is consistent with the notion that being treated fairly satisfies a basic need". Research conducted in 2003 at Emory University, Georgia, involving Capuchin Monkeys demonstrated that other cooperative animals also possess such a sense and that "inequity aversion may not be uniquely human." indicating that ideas of fairness and justice may be instinctual in nature.

- (a) What demonstrated that other cooperative animals also possess a sense of justice?
- (b) What was freely debated?
